PROJECT BACKGROUND

The World First Aid Day highlighted that very different approaches to First Aid training exist across Europe. There is a significant gap in the percentage of people trained in First Aid. While some countries show high percentages of trained people and have national regulations for mandatory first aid programs, in other countries less than 5% are trained in this field. So far, no coherent approach on First Aid has been established throughout Europe and the topic is taught and practised in different ways and quantities. The project develops a transnational network and common approach to First Aid practice. It is based on youth engagement to promote social inclusion and well-being of young people.

PROJECT OBJECTIVES

- Spread awareness of the importance of First Aid among young people and the general public
- Collect and map the different approaches and knowledge on First Aid in Europe, partner countries and networks
- Engage stakeholders and elaborate common strategies in the field of Health Assistance
- Create blended training materials for young people, Health– and Youth organizations
- Communicate training needs, learning methods and further raise awareness

EUinAid aims to improve skills and competences of young people and combines the use of an open multilingual learning platform with Youth Exchanges.
